

The flyer for the LCA Administration Workshop features the Twenty20 Vision logo at the top left. Below it, the title "LCA Administration Workshop" is centered. To the right, a blue vertical bar contains the quote "If we are leaders, we should do our best" from 1 Cor. 4:18. Further down, another quote from Acts 9:31 is displayed: "Then the church throughout Judea, Galilee and Samaria enjoyed a time of peace. It was strengthened, and encouraged by the Holy Spirit, it grew in numbers, living in the fear of the Lord." Below these quotes, the date "17 and 18 March 2012" is listed. A small table provides venue and date details. The middle section contains an overview of the workshop's purpose and course content. At the bottom, there are two photographs: one of a church interior and another of a smiling woman.

OVERVIEW
Administration is a vital part of any organisation. Spend two days exploring the administration functions of the Lutheran Church of Australia and New Zealand, including a snap-shot of the history of the LCA/LCNZ. Gain insight into the structures, policies and key personnel that keep the church running, and explore where we are headed as a National Synod. Engage in hands-on training with the LAMP system—our new and developing portal for finding people, places and reports—and learn how to make LAMP work for you.

One of them is bound to a CollectionViewSource. When I add a new record to the collection source it gets updated in the grid view. Now I want to get the collection as a datasource for the other grid. I have tried binding the collection directly to the grid and also setting the data source. Is there any way to convert a datasource to a datasource? A: Yes, you can cast the DataGridView.DataSource property to the correct type. For example, if the collection contains strings, you can do this:

DataGridView grid =...; CollectionViewSource view = grid.DataSource as CollectionViewSource; if (view!= null) { DataTable
table = view.View.Cast().ToTable(grid.DataSource); grid.DataSource = table; }

I know there are more of us. We just got bit of a slack in here, and the urge to kiss is a fairly universal sentiment. Chances are you know someone who would go with you, and even if you don't, you've already been invited by someone else. Not quite that person, but I'd probably go with you too if that was the case. I think it's easier when it's multiple people... when it's just one person, there's no way to tell if they'll turn their head, there's no way to be sure if they'll get sick of it and leave... Well, one guy in the group is single and looking. We are talking about setting up a blind date. I really don't want him to know he's being set up if he has a girlfriend, because the I'm-a-fraud-syndrome doesn't kick in when you know you're being set up and your source of misery knows you know. Hear hear. I'm afraid I might fall for the 'if she says no, she says no, so you're safe' line, which is just a nonsense based on experience. Why would you fall for that? It sounds like your world revolves around her, and that makes you vulnerable. Actually, I think it's more likely that you fall for the line that I'm 100% sure I'm in love with her, and that this is our perfect match. I try to counteract that with the line that she's been 82157476af
